

Happy 4th of July!

The Fourth of July has been a federal holiday here in the United States since 1941. The celebration of the Fourth of July goes back to the 18th century and the American Revolution. It was on July 2, 1776 that the Continental Congress voted for independence and then two days later the delegates from the 13 colonies adopted the Declaration of Independence that was drafted by Thomas Jefferson. From 1776 until now the fourth of July has been celebrated as the start of American Independence with fireworks, parades, concerts, barbecues, and festivals. It's interesting to know that John Adams believed that July 2nd was the correct date to celebrate the birth of American Independence and would even turn down invitations to appear at the Fourth of July Events. July 4, 1826 was the 50 year anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence along with the day that John Adams and Thomas Jefferson both died.
